Perform Like a Champion

Initiating activity does not make someone a leader. Proclaiming oneself the leader does not mean one is a leader. It does not matter what your title, salary, office location, car, or mother say. You are only a true leader when others follow you eagerly.

Perform Like a Champion helps leaders develop the Emotional Intelligence and savvy to build more genuine relationships inside and outside their organizations. Participants learn how to inform, inspire, and influence in a way which makes others follow them eagerly, especially when facing challenges.

About Kelly...

Kelly Tyler's speaking career began in the 5th grade, in grammar school contests. She's been speaking with groups and winning awards ever since. Kelly's style is lively, not lecture; interactive, not intimidating; and practical, not painful.

Kelly brings solid business experience, leadership, and education (including an MBA and SPHR), along with positive energy, to each client.

She is more than an entertaining speaker and author--she's also a smart business professional who makes her time with people worthwhile.

She understands keynotes: what works, what fails, and what wastes time.
